

Jennifer Homan

ABOUT THE ARTIST

Over the years, I have spent time traveling the highways and country roads that outline the fields and farms of Nebraska and Eastern Colorado. As the years have passed, I have observed fewer open fields under the wide skies. They have been interrupted by sprawling subdivisions and cell phone towers. The clean white farm houses, red barns, and silver bins which have provided a beautiful contrast to the green and gold fields are being swallowed up by growing communities.

As an artist, I believe it is my calling to visually preserve the present state of our land by pointing out beauty in the ordinary. I hope through my work I am able to provide the viewer with the gift of "seeing." I not only want viewers to enjoy looking at my work, but to notice the true beauty of the countryside as they travel from painting to painting.

Jennifer received her BA in painting from Colorado State University. She taught public school and workshops at the Loveland Art Academy and Loveland Museum. Today she is a member of the prestigious Pastel Society of America. Her paintings have been included in juried and solo exhibitions throughout the Midwest.
